

Things to do in LA by Wiley Yu

Last Revised: May 18, 2022

Something to note is that while I am from California, I'm from the Northern bit (Bay Area). So I don't have the most experience with SoCal. That said...

Off the top of my head:

- Santa Monica Pier
- Griffith Observatory
 - You can see Hollywood Sign from here
- Los Angeles County Museum of Art
- La Brea Tar Pits
- Natural History Museum of Los Angeles
- Koreatown
- Japantown
- See the beach I guess
 - I heard Venice Beach has a lot of homeless camps, but I haven't been in a while
- Look at UCLA campus/architecture. Inglewood is kinda boring though.
- Walt Disney Concert Hall if you like looking at that kind of architecture and are in the area
- Visit the amusement parks if you're bored and have money to burn. Esp. Disneyland and Universal. Knott's Berry Farm is meh.
- Walk of Fame kinda sucks, but I'm including it here since it's one of those touristy things even though it's ass, ya know?
- If you want, Beverly Hills, but you literally will not be able to get into any of the stores lol they require reservations and you need to be rich.

Food:

- LA has a ton of good restaurants. Just use the Yelp or whatever and you probably can't go wrong.
- SoCal in my opinion is known for the Mexican food. San Diego is probably stronger in this area, but whatever. You can compare it to Texas I guess.
- Try the seafood! I'm pretty confident it's better than Texas lol.
- Koreatown
 - LA's Koreantown is probably the strongest in the US. Maybe the world outside of Korea...
 - It's pretty popular, so try to show up early (4pm?)
- Japantown
- Bopomofo Café for boba
- The Donut Man for strawberry doughnuts
- Note: My cousin who is from the area said she recommends Chick-fil-a, but???
